PREFACE.

The Catalogue here presented to the Public, embraces the Books collected by the Presbyterian Historical Society since the period of its organization in May, 1852.

The large and valuable collection of more than eight thousand Pamphlets, Magazines and Reviews; two hundred volumes of Newspapers; three hundred Portraits; and many valuable Manuscripts, are not included in this Catalogue for want of means to prepare and print a volume of such size as would be required.

The present volume has been compiled and published, chiefly to exhibit what, in the department of books alone, has been accomplished. The result will be considered highly satisfactory, when the extent of the collection, and the character of the books, many of which are rare and of no small value, is considered; and when, also, it is understood that no fund existed for its accumulation. It has been chiefly made by a few active members of the Society, with no general cöoperation.

The collection is somewhat miscellaneous, yet mainly homogeneous with the purpose of the Society, being either historical, or a part of the literature of the denomination.

The necessary enlargement of the Society's Collections, a suitable fire-proof building, and its other aims, are subjects of deep solicitude, to secure which requires more than the zeal and liberality of its members. Their limited means cannot compass a work so wide in its scope, and essentially costly in its execution. To do this, larger resources are absolutely necessary: but these resources, it is confidently believed, will be freely and liberally tendered, as soon as the case is fairly presented to those who possess them.

The Society, therefore, hereby earnestly appeals to the members of the different branches of the Presbyterian Church for means, by donations or bequests, to secure the above objects. There is evidence to believe that with a suitable building, where the Society could guaranty their safe preservation, the collections would soon be more than doubled by the free contributions of those who possess invaluable historical materials.

The Executive Committee, who have the special care of the Society, and under whose auspices this Catalogue has been prepared and published, cannot but hope that though mute, it will eloquently plead with every one into whose hands it may fall, for the aid sought. It will be creditable to so old, numerous, and historic a body as the Presbyterian family, should her children be incited, by the stirring memories of her past achievements, and the honorable character and rich promise of usefulness of this Society, to permanently establish it by furnishing it with an appropriate building and a liberal endowment.

The haste in the preparation of this Catalogue will account for and excuse any imperfections and errors which may be apparent in it.

THE FOLLOWING IS THE FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to "The Presbyterian Historical Society," formed in 1852, and incorporated by Act of the Legislature of Pennsylvania in 1857, the sum of $ or the following described property, viz.,

(Here describe the property.)

(Then specify the purposes of the bequest.)

While it is earnestly hoped that some one person, or a few combined may present the Society with a lot, or the lot and building complete, donations or bequests of any sums will be thankfully received.

All communications on the subject of the building, or endowment, to be addressed to the Rev. D. V. McLean, D.D., at the Society's present Rooms, No. 821 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
